

LAD

- Easy in words thy file, in sense sublime;
'Tis like the ladder in the patriarch's dream,
Its foot on earth, its height above the skies. Prior.
2. Any thing by which one climbs.
Then took the help to her of a servant near about her husband, whom she knew to be of a hasty ambition; and such a one, who wanting true sufficiency to raise him, would make a ladder of any mischief. Sidney, b. ii.
- I must climb her window,
The ladder made of cords. Shakef. Two Gent. of Verona.
Northumberland, thou ladder, by the which My cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne. Shakef.
Lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber upward turns his face. Shakef.
3. A gradual rise.
Endow'd with all these accomplishments, we leave him in the full career of success, mounting fast towards the top of the ladder ecclesiastical, which he hath a fair probability to reach. Swift.
- LADDE. n. f.
Lade is the mouth of a river, and is derived from the Saxon lade, which signifies a purging or discharging; there being a discharge of the waters into the sea, or into some greater river. Gibson's Camden.
- TO LADE. v. a. preter. and part. passive, laded or laden. [from plasan, Saxon.] It is now commonly written load.
1. To load; to freight; to burthen.
And they laded their asses with corn, and departed thence.
Gen. xlii. 26.
- The experiment which sheweth the weights of several bodies in comparison with water, is of use in lading of ships, and showing what burthen they will bear. Bacon's Pb. Rem.
The vessels, heavy laden, put to sea
With prosperous winds; a woman leads the way. Dryden.
Though the peripatetic doctrine does not satisfy, yet it is as easy to account for the difficulties he charges on it, as for those his own hypothesis is laden with. Locke.
2. [plasan, to draw, Saxon.] To heave out; to throw out.
Saying, he'll lade it dry to have his way. Shakef.
They never let blood; but say, if the pot boils too fast there is no need of lading out any of the water, but only of taking away the fire; and so they allay all heats of the blood by abstinence, and cooling herbs. Temple.
If there be springs in the slate marl, there must be help to lade or pump it out. Mortimer's Husband.
- LADING. n. f. [from lade.] Weight; burthen.
Some we made prize, while others burnt and rent
With their rich lading to the bottom went. Waller.
The storm grows higher and higher, and threatens the utter loss of the ship; there is but one way to save it, which is, by throwing its rich lading overboard. South's Serm.
It happened to be foul weather, so that the mariners cast their whole lading overboard to save themselves. L'Estrange.
Why should he sink where nothing seem'd to press?
His lading little, and his ballast less. Swift.
- LADLE. n. f. [plæble, Saxon, from plasan; laugh, Erse.]
1. A large spoon; a vessel with a long handle, used in throwing out any liquid.
Some stir'd the molten ore with ladles great. Fa. Qu.
When the materials of glass have been kept long in fusion, the mixture casts up the superfluous salt, which the workmen take off with ladles. Boyle.
- A ladle for our silver dish. Prior.
2. The receptacles of a mill wheel, into which the water falling turns it.
- LADLE-FUL. n. f. [ladle and full.]
If a footman be going up with a dish of soup, let the cook with a ladle-ful dribble his livery all the way up stairs. Sw.
- LADY. n. f. [plæpiz, Saxon.]
1. A woman of high rank: the title of lady properly belongs to the wives of knights, of all degrees above them, and to the daughters of earls, and all of higher ranks.
I am much afraid, my lady, his mother, play'd false with a smith. Shakespeare's Merch. of Verona.
I would thy husband were dead; I would make thee my lady.
—I your lady, Sir John? alas, I should be a pitiful lady. Shakef. Merry Wives of Windsor.
I am sorry my relation to so deserving a lady, should be any occasion of her danger and affliction. K. Charles.
2. An illustrious or eminent woman.
O foolish fairy's son, what fury mad
Hath thee incens'd to haste thy doleful fate?
Were it not better I that lady had,
Than that thou hadst repented it too late? Fairy Qu.
I love and hate her; for she's fair and royal,
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite
Than lady ladies; winning from each one
The best she hath, and the of all compounded Out-fells them all. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
Before Homer's time this great lady was scarce heard of. Rol.

LAG

- May every lady an Evadne prove,
That shall divert me from Aspasia's love. Waller.
Should I thus the dangers of the war,
With scorn the Trojans would reward my pains,
And their proud ladies with their sweeping trains. Dryden.
We find on medals the representations of ladies, that have given occasion to whole volumes on the account only of a face. Addison on ancient Medals.
- Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,
With shadowy forests, and with champaigns rich'd,
With plementous rivers, and wide-fertile meads,
We make thee lady. Shakespeare's King Lear.
4. A word of complaisance used of women.
Say, good Cæsar,
That I some lady trifles have receiv'd,
Immodest toys, things of such dignity
As we greet modern friends withal. Shakef. Ant. and Cl.
I hope I may speak of women without offence to the ladies. Guardian.
- LADY-BEDSTRAW. n. f. [Gallium.] It is a plant of the stel-late kind; the leaves are neither rough nor knappy, and produced at the joints of the stalks, five or six in number, in a radiant form: the flower consists of one leaf, expanded toward the upper part, and divided into several segments; each of these flowers is succeeded by two dry seeds. Miller.
- LADY-BIRD. } n. f. A small red insect vaginopennous.
LADY-COW. } LADY-FLY. }
- Fly lady-bird, north, south, or east or west,
Fly where the man is found that I love best. Gay's Past.
This lady-fly I take from off the grass,
Whose spotted back might scarlet red surpass. Gay.
- LADY-DAY. n. f. [lady and day.] The day on which the annunciation of the blessed virgin is celebrated.
- LADY-LIKE. adj. [lady and like.] Soft; delicate; elegant.
Her tender constitution did declare,
Too lady-like a long fatigue to bear. Dry. Hind and Pamb.
- LADY-MANTLE. n. f. [Alchimilla.] The leaves are serrate, the cup of the flower is divided into eight segments, expanded in form of a star; the flowers are collected into bunches upon the tops of the stalks; each seed vessel generally contains two seeds. Miller.
- LADYSHIP. n. f. [from lady.] The title of a lady.
Madam, he sends your ladyship this ring. Shakespeare.
If they be nothing but mere flattemen,
Your ladyship shall observe their gravity,
And their reservedness, their many cautions, Fitting their persons. Benj. Johnson's Catiline.
- I the wronged pen to please,
Make it my humble thanks express Unto your ladyship in these. Waller.
'Tis Galla; let her ladyship but peep. Dryden's Juv.
- LADY'S-SLIPPER. n. f. [Calceolus.] It hath an anomalous flower, consisting of six dissimilar leaves, four of which are placed in form of a cross, the other two pass the middle, one of which is bifid, and rests on the other, which is swelling, and shaped like a shoe; the empalement becomes a fruit, open on three sides, to which adhere the valves, pregnant with very small seeds like dust. Miller.
- LADY'S-SMOCK. n. f. [Cardamine.] The flower consists of four leaves succeeded by narrow pods, which when ripe roll up, and cast forth their seeds: the leaves for the most part are winged. The first sort is sometimes used in medicine; the third sort is a very beautiful plant, continuing a long time in flower: they are preferred in botanick gardens, and some of them merit a place in some shady part of every curious garden, for their odd manner of casting forth their seeds on the slightest touch when the pods are ripe. Miller.
- When daisies pied, and violets blue,
And lady's-smocks all silver white,
Do paint the meadows much bedight. Shakespeare.
See here a boy gathering lilies and lady-smocks, and there a girl cropping culverkeys and cowslips, all to make gar-lands. Waller's Angler.
- Lady's-smocks* have small stringy roots that run in the ground,
and comes up in divers places. Mortimer's Husbandry.
